

ABOUT CE-IP

The circular economy represents an opportunity to address labour market imbalances and threats.

Circular economy policies are expected to help reduce the environmental impacts while generating higher levels of employment.

For this reason, the CE-IP project aims to develop new training solutions that can help match the expected expansion of green job opportunities with qualified workers, to promote a shift towards a more sustainable economy.

Our project will provide training solutions related to current jobs in the recycling sector, and new green and fair opportunities for adults with low skills, including unemployed youth.

The activities to be developed will focus on the generation of new skills and opportunities to access green and fair jobs, mainly related to the circular economy in terms of garment waste management (textile sector).

-  Creation of new innovative training solutions related to opportunities in the circular economy.
